The only way to survive in Hollywood is to toughen up. At least that’s the advice Kevin Smith, aka Silent Bob, passes on to his best friend Jason ‘Jay’ Mewes. Only Smith didn’t expect his advice to turn Jay into a psychopathic killer.

No longer content being known as Jay, the vocal half of the Jay and Silent Bob stoner duo, and Smith’s sidekick, Jay takes matters into his own hands.

He hatches a plan to dethrone Smith, take over his universe and emerge from Silent Bob’s shadow. And it’s a plan that may or may not involve the murder of Danny Trejo...

Can Jay pull it off or is it all just the fantastical ‘mewesings’ of an insane ex-drug addict?
One of Hollywood’s worst kept secrets is that movie-making isn’t all glitz and glamour. There are many, of course, who choose to ignore the dark underbelly of show business, but few would deny that it exists.

Here we have an opportunity not only to shine a light on just how dark things can get when the cameras stop rolling, but to have some fun in the process.

There’s no shortage of desperation orbiting the entertainment business.

To outsiders, it can seem as though it’s surrounded by an impregnable metal fence. People are willing to go to remarkable and frankly dangerous lengths to gain admittance to the enchanted kingdom inside.

Nowadays, there are many roads to fame. But what many forget is that the quicker your journey to fame, the faster your trip back to anonymity is likely to be. So how do you remain relevant? How do you stay on top? What are you willing to do to continue to live your dream?

We’ve all fantasised about being famous for five minutes. Madness in the Method will show you exactly what it’s like. We’ll transport you behind the wall of fame. You’ll taste and feel Hollywood. Meet actors playing stars, and stars playing themselves. You’ll be, in short, an insider.

Yes, you’ll experience glitz ‘n’ glamour. But you’ll also witness pressure, judgment and heartbreak. You’ll watch a man descend into madness as the world around him spirals out of his control. But this is real life, not Hollywood. And that means you may not get the ending you expect.

Of course, if you’re a fan of Jay and Silent Bob, then this is already a dream come true.

Who’d have dared hope that Jay and Silent Bob would be reunited on screen, playing themselves? It’s every fan’s fantasy — and it’s about to become a reality.

But Madness in the Method isn’t just for hardcore fans. Our job is to ensure that it also works for the casual viewer who simply wants to watch a great Hollywood set comedy thriller.

We’ll shoot Madness in the Method in a documentary style, which will allow us to peek into the intricate lives of our protagonists without losing cinematic sweep and elegance. And we’ll be sure to retain an expensive, big-budget feel throughout the project.

Madness in the Method has the vision, originality and commercial appeal to make a worldwide splash. We embrace the challenge of bringing it to life.

Jason Mewes and Dominic Burns, directors
New Jersey-born Jason Mewes’ rise to global fame began with a small black-and-white movie called Clerks, in which he played Jay to long-time friend Kevin Smith’s Silent Bob. Made in 1994, Clerks joined the likes of Pulp Fiction, Leon and The Shawshank Redemption in paving the way to Hollywood’s indie boom and a new era in filmmaking.

Jay — the mouthy half of the mischievous marijuana dealers Jay and Silent Bob — was so popular that he went on to star in a string of Kevin Smith movies, including cult hit Mallrats and the acclaimed Chasing Amy, both starring Ben Affleck. Jason also put in an appearance in Dogma, whose all-star cast included Matt Damon, Ben Affleck, Alan Rickman, Salma Hayek and Chris Rock.

Jay and Silent Bob then starred in their own comedy movie, Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back, alongside Will Ferrell, Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Ben Affleck, Matt Damon, Jon Stewart and Jason Lee. The pair even found the time to shoot a hilarious cameo in Scream 3.

Jason has subsequently appeared in numerous movies and TV shows across a range of genres, demonstrating not only his versatility as an actor but also his star power. In 2006, he re-united with Smith in the much anticipated sequel to Clerks, which was a critical, creative and commercial success, famously receiving a six-minute standing ovation when it premiered at the 2006 Cannes Film Festival. Clerks II was followed by romantic sex comedy Zach and Miri Make A Porno alongside Seth Rogen and Elizabeth Banks.

Jason moved into producing in 2013 with the animated feature film Jay and Silent Bob’s Super Groovy Cartoon Movie. He has recently helped develop a Jay and Silent Bob video game, Chronic Blunt Punch.

Jason is also one of the most popular podcaster in the world. He frequently tours the world with his podcast, Jay and Silent Bob Get Old, which focuses on Jay’s addictions and sexual exploits, and boasts downloads in the millions. He also has nearly 400,000 followers on Twitter.

Given his global popularity and profile, Jason's directional debut is already generating excitement among his fans and interest from the global entertainment industry.
Rob Weston developed his first movie property in 2005, mentored by former 20th Century Fox managing director Tim Hampton (Aliens). Entitled Where Love Reigns, the stellar talent attached to the project included Martin Scorsese (The Departed), Oscar-winning cinematographer Jack Cardiff (African Queen), Golden Globe-nominated composer Michael Nyman (The Piano), Golden Globe-winning actor Alan Rickman (Die Hard) and Oscar nominee Armin Mueller Stahl (Shine).

Weston has since gone on to produce/exec produce multiple movies with a combined budget of more than $50m. His credits include festival favourite Gnaw (2008) and, in partnership with The Weinstein Company, the sequel to hit horror movie The Zombie Diaries (2011), hailed by US magazine Fangoria as ‘the best horror movie of the year’. Simultaneously, Weston made the Spanish-language thriller Die Again (aka Wake Up and Die).

In 2013, Weston partnered with Rio Negro to exec produce the remake of Elsa & Fred with Oscar-winning producer Ed Saxon (Silence of the Lambs) and Oscar-nominated director Michael Radford (Il Postino). The cast included yet more Oscar winners: Christopher Plummer (Beginners), Shirley MacLaine (Terms of Endearment) and Marcia Gay Harden (Mystic River). Millennium Entertainment released Elsa & Fred after an award-winning festival run.

In the same year, Weston made Sienna Guillory (Resident Evil) thriller The List for Palm D’Or-nominated director Klaus Huttman, followed by the sci-fi extravaganza The Last Scout for Epic Pictures.

Due for release in 2016, the horror movie also stars Chloe Sevigny (American Horror Story) and Oscar nominee Meg Tilly (Agnes of God).
Dominic Burns
PRODUCER | CO-DIRECTOR | WRITER

D ominic Burns’ feature-film debut Cut (2010), starring Zach Galligan (Gremlins 1 and 2), was the world’s first horror movie to be shot in a single continuous take — a feat that many in the business had insisted was impossible. Burns’ 2011 follow-up, Jack Falls, which featured an all-star British cast, was picked up by Lionsgate and distributed around the world. Richard E Grant (Withnail and I) joined yet another strong British cast for his next outing, How To Stop Being a Loser, which was Burns’ first theatrically distributed movie in the UK.

Since then, Burns has directed and produced a further five movies, all of which have been distributed theatrically across the world. With his trailers receiving millions of hits online, Burns’ films are available on Netflix, Blu-ray, DVD, iTunes and VOD, and have aired on TV in numerous territories.

In 2012, Burns directed the horror film Airborne, for which he took the Best Director honours at that year’s British Independent Film Festival. Airborne also starred Mark Hamill — aka Luke Skywalker — who was nominated for BIFA’s Best Supporting Actor, and Kimberly Jaraj, who won Best Supporting Actress. Burns’ directorial credits also include A-list talent such as Jean Claude Van Damme, Julian Glover, Sheridan Smith, Andrew Shim, Martin Kemp, Dexter Fletcher, Adam Deacon, Julian Ovenden, Jason Flemyng, Martin Compston, Matt Willis, Gemma Atkinson, Olivia Hallinan, Edmund Kingsley, Alan Ford, Sean Pertwee — and a live tiger!

Burns’ relationship with Jason Mewes dates back to 2014, when he produced zombie apocalypse Devil’s Tower, the feature debut for writer Adam Marsh and director Owen Tooth.

His latest film, Allies, is a World War two set action thriller, distributed by eOne in the UK and US. Starring Julian Ovenden as a US captain dropped behind enemy lines in France, Allies is, by Burns’ own admission, his best work so far and signals his intention to “set the bar higher” — creatively and commercially moving forward.

Luke Bryant
DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Luke Bryant is a highly sought-after cinematographer who possesses that rarest of skills — the ability to deliver exquisite photography against the clock and on limited resources, be it a lack of camera equipment or sub-standard lighting.

Whatever the physical and time constraints, Bryant refuses to sacrifice quality and delivers result after perfect result.

Bryant’s talent means that he is in constant demand for commercials, music videos, television and cinema. He’s as comfortable working with power brand such as Ikea, Nintendo, Stella Artois and Disney as he is with the unpredictable madness of the Keith Lemon TV shows. The Cast

Jason Mewes

Jason Mewes was working towards a career in roofing when he made his film debut as Jay in his friend Kevin Smith’s 1994 film Clerks. The movie was a huge success — so much so that Jason Mewes has been closely identified with Jay ever since. He reprised the character in Mallrats (1995), Chasing Amy (1997), Dogma (1999), Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back (2001) and Clerks II (2006), and is now set star as Jay in the upcoming sequels Mallrats II (2016) and Clerks III (TBA).

Jason also supplied Jay’s voice in Clerks: The Animated Series. Jason also put in an appearance, alongside Smith’s Silent Bob, in the films Scream 3 and Bottoms Up, as well as the Canadian television series Degrassi: The Next Generation.

In the show, the duo is seen shooting a new film for Smith’s View Askew Productions — Jay and Silent Bob Go Canadian, Eh? — at Degrassi Community School. They appear again in show at the premiere of Jay and Silent Bob go Canadian, Eh? In January 2005, Mewes, Smith and Degrassi star Stacie Mistysyn even made the cover of the Canadian TV Guide.

Aside from his work as Jay, he has demonstrated his versatility in a range of films, TV shows, commercials and voice-overs. In 1998, he starred as ‘Gary Lamb – Ground Activist’ in a series of Nike spots directed by Smith. From 2010 to 2012, he was cast as ‘Jimmy the Janitor’ for 26 episodes of the Canadian TV series Todd and the Book of Pure Evil. In the video game Scarface: The World Is Yours, he provided the voice-over for a thief who steals some tapes and gets injured in a fistfight with the titular character, Tony ‘Scarface’ Montana. And in 2015, he starred as gun dealer Eddie Brooks in the sixth season of iconic TV series Hawaii Five-O.

Jasong’s film credits range from horror movie Breath of Hate, in which he played the love interest of a dysfunctional escort, to the romantic sex comedy Zach and Miri Make A Porno, in which he appeared in the nude.

Behind the camera, Mewes is co-executive producer on Smith’s Hulu-exclusive series Spoilers with Kevin Smith. In 2013, he co-produced the animated feature film Jay and Silent Bob’s Super Groovy Cartoon Movie with his wife Jordan Monsanto, which was based on the Bluntman and Chronic comic book that Smith wrote as a companion piece to the film.

Jason is also one of the world’s most successful podcasters, co-hosting with Smith a weekly podcast entitled Jay & Silent Bob Get Old, in which he discusses his former addiction issues.
Danny Trejo's own story is as remarkable as any of the character arcs in his movies. A child drug addict and criminal, Trejo was in and out of jail for 11 years. While serving time in San Quentin, he won the lightweight and welterweight boxing titles and successfully completed a 12-step rehabilitation programme that changed his life.

While speaking at a Cocaine Anonymous meeting in 1985, Trejo met a young screenwriter who later asked to meet him on the set of Runaway Train. The screenwriter knew of Trejo’s boxing skills and offered him a job training actors for a boxing match. Director Andrey Konchalovskiy saw Trejo working with Eric Roberts and immediately offered him a featured role as Roberts' opponent in the film.

Trejo proceeded to claw his way up the cast list of various movies, securing roles in Death Wish 4 with Charles Bronson, Marked For Death with Steven Seagal and Femme Fatal opposite Colin Firth. But it wasn’t until 1995 that he got his big break in Robert Rodriguez’s Desperado, starring alongside Antonio Banderas and Salma Hayek.

He never looked back. Desperado was followed by Heat starring Al Pacino and Robert De Niro. In 1996, he was working again with his soon-to-be long-time collaborator, Rodriguez, this time on cult hit From Dusk Til Dawn with George Clooney. He went on to star in two sequels, followed in 2014 by Netflix’s From Dusk Til Dawn TV series.

The roles came thick and fast. He starred in Anaconda with Ice Cube, Jon Voight and Owen Wilson; The Replacement Killers with Chow Yun Fat; Six Days Seven Nights with Harrison Ford and David Schwimmer; and the all-star blockbuster Conair with Nicolas Cage and John Cusack. He worked with Rodriguez on all four Spy Kids movies, as well as Once Upon a Time In Mexico with Johnny Depp, Eva Mendes and Mickey Rourke. And that's all without mentioning the remake of Halloween, Predators, Vigilante Diaries, Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy and the Ridiculous Six. In fact, Trejo currently has 314 projects listed on his IMDB page.

In addition to movies, Trejo has enjoyed considerable success on the small screen. However, he is arguably best known as the star of his own movie franchise, which all started with the release of Tarantino and Rodriguez’s movie Grindhouse. That film featured a fake trailer for a movie called Machete, starring Danny Trejo as the titular character. It was meant as a joke but Trejo’s fans began a campaign to get the movie made.

The result was a box-office smash that saw Trejo star alongside Robert De Niro, Steven Seagal, Jessica Alba and Lindsay Lohan. In fact, Machete was so successful that a sequel — Machete Kills — was soon in the works, featuring Lady Gaga (who reportedly got the part after bumping into Trejo and chatting to him about the movie), Mel Gibson, Charlie Sheen, Vanessa Hudgens, Cuba Gooding Jnr, Sofia Vergara and Amber Heard. The third Machete movie has now been announced.
Kevin Smith can legitimately be described as Hollywood royalty. He’s directed some of the most famous talent in the business and his films are released theatrically around the world. He’s acted in productions ranging from Die Hard to Veronica Mars to Daredevil. He has nearly three million followers on Twitter, runs a network of podcasts downloaded by millions of people across the planet and boasts a social-network empire with massive reach. He guests on the biggest talk shows in the US and around the world. He’s written three books and many more scripts. His live shows — which he tours internationally invariably sell out and are often filmed and released on DVD. He rubs shoulders with the biggest names in Hollywood and his fans include Johnny Depp, Ben Affleck and Quentin Tarantino...

And it all started with a micro-budget indie flick called Clerks, acknowledged today as one of the architects of indie cinema. Smith emerged alongside the likes of Quentin Tarantino, Steven Soderbergh and Jon Favreau in the early 1990s and was soon being talked about as one of the most exciting new talents in the business. Clerks came out of nowhere in 1994 to be a sensational hit at the Sundance Film Festival. It was bought by Miramax in what was to become the start of a long and fruitful friendship between Smith and uber-producer Harvey Weinstein.

Smith’s follow-up, Mallrats, proved he was no one-hit wonder. It was also the first of many times that he would direct the then virtually unknown Ben Affleck. It also proved that the Jay and Silent Bob duo, played by Smith and his best friend Jason Mewes, were here to stay. Smith then directed the critically acclaimed Chasing Amy — again starring Ben Affleck — before assembling an all-star cast that included Matt Damon, Ben Affleck, Alan Rickman, Jason Mewes and Chris Rock for the controversial hit Dogma.

A starring role in his own movie was up next for Smith as he helmed Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back, featuring another all-star cast: Will Ferrell, Jason Mewes, Mark Hamill and Jon Stewart. Increasing his range, Smith’s next directional effort was the romantic comedy Jersey Girl, starring Ben Affleck, Jennifer Lopez and Liv Tyler.

Returning to his roots, Smith then starred in and directed the hotly anticipated Clerks II, which was loved by critics and fans alike and famously received a six-minute standing ovation at its premiere at the 2006 Cannes Film Festival.

Next up was directing Seth Rogen, Elizabeth Banks and Jason Mewes in the ingenious and controversial Zach and Miri Make A Porno, before finally getting the chance to direct his childhood hero, Bruce Willis, in Cop Out.

Most recently, Smith has directed his own daughter — alongside Lily Rose Depp and her father Johnny in the upcoming horror comedy Yoga Hosers, which we also wrote. For the small screen, his recent work includes directing The Flash for US network The CW, and his own half-hour TV comedy pilot HollyWeed.

Smith is a massive talent by any standard and is a huge asset to any project to which he attaches his name, be it as an actor, director or writer.
Matt Willis and his band Busted skyrocketed to fame in the early 2000s with a string of number-one songs. Launched in August 2002, Busted made their first appearance on the cover of Smash Hits — the first pop band ever to make the magazine’s cover before releasing a single.

Busted’s debut single, What I Go to School For, was inspired by a teacher on whom Willis had a crush at school. It was released in September 2002 and stormed the UK Singles Chart.

The follow-up — Year 3000 came out in January 2003 and was an even bigger hit. Next up was You Said No, which went straight in at number one in the charts. Their debut album would go on to sell 1.2 million copies by the end of that year.

The debut album’s final single, Sleeping with the Light On, was yet another massive hit and cemented Busted as one of the biggest bands on the UK music scene. Going from strength to strength, the boys embarked on an arena tour of the UK.

Their second album sold over a million copies and produced yet more hit singles: Who’s David, Air Hostess and Crashed the Wedding. By the end of 2004, their awards tally included two Brits, and a Record of the Year.

Then, in 2005, disaster struck. The band broke up at the peak of their fame, leaving a generation of Busted fans broken hearted.

But Willis’ career was far from over. He went on to win reality TV show I’m a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!; he toured and released a successful solo album; and he acted in numerous stage and television productions, including the re-make of ITV’s hit Eighties comedy drama Birds of a Feather in 2014. The same year also saw him land a part in Dominic Burns’ Second World War movie Allies, in which he delivered a breath-taking performance as Private Billy Munns. Allies proved that Willis’ acting abilities were every bit as strong as his musical talent and he was soon in demand for film roles.

Movies would have to wait, however, as Willis and fellow Busted co-founder James Bourne decided to join forces with prolific band McFly to form mega-pop ensemble McBusted. What was expected to be a small tour suddenly turned into a phenomenon and the newly formed band embarked on a huge arena tour in the UK. They then went on to support One Direction on 2015 On The Road Again world tour.

And even bigger headlines were made later that year when the third member of Busted Charlie Simpson — returned to the band after a 12-year hiatus. A new album and a UK arena tour soon followed.

Busted are now set to release their next album and promote it around the world. But despite the demands on his time, Willis has agreed to join the Madness in the Method team, lending both his acting talent and his star power to the film’s line-up.
Stanley Martin Lieber was born on December 28, 1922, in New York City to Romanian immigrants Celia and Jack Lieber. With part of his childhood spent during the Great Depression, Lieber and his younger brother, Larry, watched his parents struggle to make ends meet for the family.

Lieber, who later shortened his name to “Lee” as a writer, went on to be hired as an office assistant at Timely Comics in 1939 and became an interim editor for the company in the early 1940s. Lee also served domestically in the Army during World War II, working as a writer and illustrator.

Co-creating the Fantastic Four
In the early ’60s, Lee was called upon by his boss to create a series for Marvel Comics (Timely’s new name) that could compete with rival DC Comics’ hit title Justice League of America. Citing writing influences like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Jules Verne, and following the encouragement of his wife Joan, Lee did away with some of the usual superhero conventions.

Hence, with artist and co-creator Jack Kirby, the Fantastic Four was born in 1961. A slew of new Marvel characters soon followed, including the Hulk, Spider-Man, Doctor Strange, Daredevil and the X-Men.

Marvel Comics became a highly popular franchise, and Stan Lee was promoted to editorial director and publisher in 1972. He later moved to the West Coast to be involved in Marvel’s film ventures and eventually became chairman emeritus.

Lee was particularly known for his dynamism with copy and for imbuing his characters with a sense of humanity, tackling real-world issues like bigotry and drug use, which would influence comics for decades.

An outgoing, humorous showman, he also developed a number of slogans as part of his shtick, including a Latin-derived call to rise, “Excelsior!”

Witnessing the Rise of a Blockbuster Industry, Lee has become involved in a variety of multimedia projects while also serving as an ambassador for Marvel, even though he has filed lawsuits against the company and been the subject of debate over appropriate compensation for comic creators.

The writer has seen Marvel develop into an entity that has inspired blockbuster film entertainment like the Iron Man and X-Men series, Thor and The Avengers. Lee started intellectual-property company POW! Entertainment in 2001 and the following year published his autobiography, Excelsior! The Amazing Life of Stan Lee. Later in the decade he received a Medal of Arts honor from President George W. Bush and launched the History Channel show Stan Lee’s Superhumans, a series that looked at people with remarkable skills and abilities.

2012 saw more new ventures. Lee co-wrote a graphic novel- Romeo and Juliet: The War-which landed on The New York Times’ best-seller list and launched a YouTube channel, Stan Lee’s World of Heroes, which features comic, comedy and sci-fi content.

At the end of the year, the ever-active Lee turned 90.
Teri Hatcher was born on December 8, 1964, in Palo Alto, California. After getting her start as a cheerleader for the San Francisco 49ers, she landed a recurring role on the television series MacGyver.

Next up for Teri Hatcher was a role as a mermaid dancer on the popular television show The Love Boat. This led to a recurring role on the action-adventure series MacGyver starring Richard Dean Anderson.

She made her film debut in The Big Picture (1989) directed by Christopher Guest. Hatcher continued making movies and television appearances, most notably in Soapdish (1991) with Kevin Kline and Sally Field.

In 1993, she began a four-season run as Superman’s girlfriend, Lois Lane, on Lois & Clark.

Starring opposite Dean Cain in the dual role of the man of steel and Clark Kent, she became part of a television super couple.

Hatcher then took another iconic part - the love interest of James Bond in the 1997 installment of the series Tomorrow Never Dies with Pierce Brosnan.

In 2004, Hatcher joined the cast of Desperate Housewives. The hit series earned her SAG and Golden Globe awards, and made her one of the highest-paid actresses on American TV.

In addition to acting, Teri Hatcher had her first book published in 2006. Entitled Burnt Toast and Other Philosophies of Life, she shares much of what she has learned about life and love with her readers.

Hatcher is also an active supporter of several charities, like the Make a Wish Foundation.

David Dastmalchian

David Dastmalchian is originally from Kansas. He moved to Chicago, IL, to study acting at The Theatre School, DePaul University. After college, David worked as a professional fisherman in Alaska, a circus performer, movie theatre usher and playwright. He is an ensemble member of Shattered Globe Theatre Company and Caffeine Theatre in Chicago.

Dastmalchian’s feature film debut came in the late 2000s, as the Joker’s deranged henchman, Thomas Schiff, in Christopher Nolan’s movie The Dark Knight. His turn as Bob Taylor in Denis Villeneuve’s Prisoners received strong reviews. Richard Corliss of Time called Dastmalchian’s performance “excellent - chatty, modest with some subtle telltale psychopathy” and The Guardian’s Paul MacInnes likened his introduction as a new suspect to Kevin Spacey’s entrance in Seven.

He has been on television as Simon on the Fox sci-fi series Almost Human episode “Simon Says”, as a chess expert and murder suspect on CSI: Crime Scene Investigation and as Oz Turner on the BBC series Intruders. Other television appearances include the FX comedy The League, the Showtime series Ray Donovan, and NBC’s medical drama ER.

Dastmalchian’s feature film appearances include starring roles in the psychological thriller The Employer, the indie grindhouse hit Sushi Girl, the Detroit-based drama Cass (winner, San Diego Black Film Festival), Girls Will Be Girls 2012 (sequel to the cult hit, Girls Will Be Girls), Saving Lincoln, Virgin Alexander and the Peyton Reed-helmed Marvel Studios film, Ant-Man.

In March 2014, Dastmalchian was awarded the Special Jury Prize for Courage in Storytelling at the South by Southwest Film Festival. He wrote and starred in the feature film Animals, directed by Collin Schiffli. Ashley Moreno of The Austin Chronicle credits Dastmalchian’s screenplay with “present[ing] an authenticity often lacking in films about drug abuse.” Film Threat’s Brian Tallerico similarly sings the praises of Dastmalchian’s breakout performance, noting his ability to “capture that sense of self-loathing that comes through in the body language of an addict without overselling it.”

Other feature film appearances include starring roles in the psychological thriller The Employer, the indie grindhouse hit Sushi Girl, the Detroit-based drama Cass (winner, San Diego Black Film Festival), Girls Will Be Girls 2012 (sequel to the cult hit, Girls Will Be Girls), Saving Lincoln, Virgin Alexander and the Peyton Reed-helmed Marvel Studios film, Ant-Man.

Dean Cain

Dean Cain born Dean George Tanaka July 31, 1966 is an American actor. He is most widely known for his role as Clark Kent/Superman in the popular American television series Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman.

Immediately after graduating, Cain signed on as a free agent with the Buffalo Bills, an NFL football team, but a knee injury during training camp ended his football career before it began.

With little hope of returning to sports, he turned to screenwriting and then acting, shooting dozens of commercials including a famous volleyball one for Kellogg’s Frosties and appearing on popular television shows like Grapevine, A Different World and Beverly Hills, 90210.

In 1993, Cain took on his biggest role to date as Superman in the television series Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman.

In 1998, Cain started the Angry Dragon Entertainment production company, which produced the TBS Superstation television series Ripley’s Believe It or Not!

Vincent Peter Jones was born on January 5, 1965 in Watford, England. He first came to public notice as a professional footballer, playing in the English Football League. Noted as one of soccer's hard men, he leaped to fame when a photographer, at a match, snapped him "marking" Newcastle United's Paul Gascoigne, by grabbing his testicles. He has played for Wimbledon, Leeds United, Sheffield United, Chelsea, and Queens Park Rangers. Internationally, he played for Wales, qualifying for that nationality through his grandparents.

He made his first acting appearance in the British comedy/thriller, Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels (1998), at age 33, although he had previous presented a video on football's hard men (for which he was censured by the Football Association).

He starred in the blockbuster, X-Men: La decisión final (2006), as "Cain Marko", also known as "The Juggernaut". Prior to that, he played the scowling soccer coach illustrating both his likability and comedic side in Dreamworks’ She’s the Man (2006), with Amanda Bynes.

Other projects include a lead role in Johnny Was (2006), starring Roger Daltrey, Eriq La Salle and Lennox Lewis, and he also appears in the independent feature, The Riddle (2007), starring Vanessa Redgrave and Derek Jacobi.

Over the years, he has received a number of prestigious awards, which showcase his accomplishments as a talented actor. In 1997, he won Satellite TV’s “Personality of the Year”, from Satellite TV Europe Magazine. In 1998, GQ Magazine named Jones “Man of the Year”.

Jones won Best Debut in 1999 for Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels (1998) at Empire Magazine’s “The Awards 1999” and was titled the Male Cigar Personality of the Year at the Millennium Cigar Awards.

In 2001, he was named Best British Actor for Empire Magazine’s “The Awards 2001”.

In 2002, Jones received the award for Best Supporting Actor for Night at the Golden Eagle (2001) at the New York Film Festival and, in 2005, he was honored with Best Newcomer for Slipstream (2005) at London’s Sci-Fi Film Festival.
Casper Van Dien was born and grew up in Milton, Florida. Moving to Los Angeles, Van Dien landed a number of small parts in various television series and movies.

Two early breaks were recurring roles as Ty Moody on the daytime soap opera One Life to Live and the prime time drama Beverly Hills, 90210. Keen to expand his acting talents, Van Dien took a bit part in the video game, Wing Commander IV.

This directly led to his being cast as Tarzan in Tarzan and the Lost City (1998). Van Dien next played Brom von Brunt in Tim Burton’s 1999 film Sleepy Hollow, a reworking of the classic Washington Irving tale.

In 2000 Van Dien appeared in Cutaway as well as Aaron Spelling’s short-lived NBC prime time soap Titans with Yasmine Bleeth, John Barrowman, Perry King and Victoria Principal.

He filmed several scenes as Patrick Bateman in 2002’s The Rules of Attraction, the character that Christian Bale had played in 2000’s American Psycho. However, the scenes wound up on the cutting room floor.

In 2008 Van Dien returned to the role of Rico in Starship Troopers 3: Marauder, a direct-to-video sequel to Starship Troopers.
Judd Nelson is perhaps best known for his part in the 1980’s brat pack. With over eighty-six movies and television appearances under his belt, Nelson has played everything from a rebel teen to a comedic serial killer. While the most high profile portion of his career took place in the beginning, Judd Nelson has continued to take part in well received acting and writing work for decades.

Before he rose to instant stardom as tough guy John Bender in The Breakfast Club, Judd Nelson majored in philosophy at the prestigious Haverford College in Pennsylvania. Born in Portland, Maine to attorney Leonard Nelson and state assemblywoman Merle Nelson, Judd’s talent for performing was discovered when he attended a friend’s audition and was told he had to audition himself, if he wanted to stay.

The experience ignited an interest in acting and Judd left school to move to New York City, where he studied acting at the Stella Adler Conservatory.

Judd began professionally acting in the early 1980s, landing his first role as the street-smart Eddie Keaton in the 1984 comedy Making the Grade. The following year was career changing when he starred in three films: Fandango, The Breakfast Club and St. Elmo’s Fire, the latter of the two which put him in the spotlight and on posters in many teen girls’ bedroom walls. After he appeared in The Breakfast Club, the media dubbed Judd and several other young actors the “Brat Pack,” including his Breakfast Club co-stars—Ally Sheedy, Emilio Estevez, Anthony Michael Hall and Molly Ringwald. Also part of the club were Demi Moore, Rob Lowe and Andrew McCarthy, who starred alongside Judd in St. Elmo’s Fire. The group spent much time together off screen as well.

In 1996, Judd since then has appeared in various films and television movies including appearances on shows like Two and a Half Men and CSI: Crime Scene Investigation.
Mickey Gooch actor, producer, director.

Born and raised on the New Jersey shore. He started studying screen writing at the age of 18 when he knew in his heart that the idea of storytelling was the only future he could see himself doing. Finding his love of art at a young age through oil painting and photography, it was through these mediums that he could express the true artist inside.

In the last 6 months without taking the tradition route of an agent or manager, Mickey has made a real mark on the industry by producing, directing and acting in some sought after films.

These raw budding comedy actors where only described in his mind as a group of Skit Bags. Most sketches where up loaded directly to youtube and ran about 5 min long. With each sketch the young film maker made the more they improved and the early mistakes became few and far between. More importantly he created a team that he could count on.

In the summer of 2014 Skit Bags Entertainment started their first production of short films. That summer they completed 4 short films on extremely tight budgets. They even filmed their first Comedy thriller, called Side Swiped, a Hollywood based murder mystery about a producer that seduces women into thinking they have “the part”.

Mickey has recently wrapped (produced/starred) in two major projects with extremely reputable actors. The first Project was a passion project that came into development as an idea in the fall of 2013.

The title of the project is Urine Analysis. The story of “Al” who poorly runs a Rehab and the collection of direct addicts that live there.

February 2015 marked a monumental success in his career as he hosted the premier event of the official Wrap Party for his first Feature Film, The Head Thieves starring Mickey Gooch and Dante Basco (Rufio,Hook).

Top distribution companies are keeping an eye on it. Described as the R rated napoleon dynamite, and featuring a guest star appearance from Sandy Martin, Bojesse Christopher, Daniel Baldwin, Andy Dick, and Real worlds Johnny Bananas.
Gina Carano Classified by the Unified Women’s MMA Rankings as the third best 145 lb (66 kg.) female fighter in the world, her current MMA record stands at 7 wins and 1 loss.

It was after that devastating loss, black eye and all, that a deflated Gina met with Academy Award winning director Steven Soderbergh for lunch in San Diego. He had seen her fight earlier on CBS and dreamed of building a film around her. Immediately he was struck with her presence and intriguing mix of muscular power and eye-catching femininity. Inspired, he wrote the role of Mallory Kane specifically for her although she is nothing like the unsmiling, structured, alpha female character. Soderbergh assembled an impressive cast and all heaped praise on the fighter and aspiring actress. Channing Tatum, a huge fan of Gina’s and the MMA, immediately signed on when he learned she was involved in the project.

Ewan McGregor, having no clue who Gina Carano was, studied many of her fights on YouTube. Initially horrified by the violence of the sport, he with met with her and was taken with how quiet, gentle and thoughtful she was out of the ring. He recalls hurting his hand when he accidentally punched Gina in the head during the film’s final climatic fight scene.

Gina, completely unaffected by the punch and worried she had injured the actor, immediately popped to her feet and asked if he was okay. Antonio Banderas found Gina to be beautiful, natural and real and believes she has a career in front of her. Michael Fassbender, who Gina now considers a mentor, thought her extraordinary and was impressed with her work ethic. Michael Douglas, who topped out the A-list cast, heralded Gina’s self-control.

Gina is proud to have been a pioneer in Women’s MMA, for kicking down barriers and inspiring and paving the way for the next wave of female fighters.

She recently joined the 87Eleven Stunt team, the same team that propelled her to star status with their work on Indomable (2011).

With film projects like Fast & Furious 6 (2013), In the Blood (2014) and rumors of Wonder Woman flying around, Gina Carano has found her niche in the Action Heroine film market.

Her newest challenge as an athlete. To cross over into film successfully.

Target Market

The target demographic for Madness in the Method is male and female aged 14 to 50. As Madness in the Method is both a comedy and a thriller, we believe it will appeal to fans of both genres, as well as to fans of the metacinema school of filmmaking, in which actors play fictional versions of themselves.

Recent examples of the meta-movie phenomenon include buddy comedy This Is The End, magic realism hit Being John Malkovich, cult crime drama JCVD, and the multi-awarded satirical comedy The Player.

Madness in the Method

’s meta credentials include the fact that its core actors — Jason Mewes, Kevin Smith and Danny Trejo — are famous the world over and have individually amassed huge cult followings in both traditional and digital media.

DISTRIBUTION AND FESTIVAL STRATEGY

We will seek to exploit both traditional and non-traditional distribution platforms in all territories worldwide, including:

- Theatrical
- Broadcast – TV / Pay TV – On Demand / Internet (Netflix, Amazon, Hulu etc)
- DVD
- Foreign Distribution
- Airlines / Cruise Ships / Hotels

The producer’s aim is to launch Madness in the Method at a high-profile film festival, such as Toronto (TIFF) or Sundance. With the film scheduled to go to camera in the fourth quarter of 2016, the timing is optimal to achieve that.

Partnerships

To build buzz around Madness in the Method, we have already opened rights negotiations with a number of major distributors with which we have well-established working relationships. We will continue these discussions at the forthcoming American Film Market in November 2016.

Many of these global heavyweights are already tracking the project and have expressed their interest in the script and talent. In addition, many of them already have strong relationships with Madness in the Methods’ producers, who are known for delivering quality content.
MARKETING AND PROMOTIONAL STRATEGY
Primary Campaign Social Media
Twitter | Facebook | YouTube

To reach the mass audience for Madness in the Method that we know is out there, we will market the movie in every way, shape and form, and at every conceivable opportunity. That process starts now, in the lead up to production. It will intensify during the filmmaking and post-production processes, and reach a crescendo at release and weeks and months that follow.

The cornerstone of Madness in the Method’s marketing strategy will be social-media outreach, supported by grassroots marketing. Social media is arguably the independent producer’s most valuable tool in that it allows access to audiences around the world on a limited marketing budget. We intend to embrace all the opportunities offered by social media to support and complement the distributor P&A, and to help build audience awareness before the film is launched in key world markets.

- Facebook/Twitter fan pages, which will include screening details, new trailers for the movie, festival updates, the announcement of various production milestones, talent information, articles about related genre films, and links to cast fan pages and press coverage.

- An exclusive Madness in the Method YouTube channel, which will provide a portal for all related video footage, including interviews, teasers and trailers.

Given the vast volume of traffic on Twitter and Facebook, a key challenge for any marketer is to make their voice heard. The fan pages are an effective way to cut through the clutter and help generate buzz at the earliest stages of production. As the project’s momentum builds, so the fan community will grow. Prior to release, teaser content from the movie will be aired to ramp up expectation and excitement.

We will engage with our in-front-of-camera talent, behind-the-scenes talent and distributors to explore all marketing avenues.

These will include promoting Madness in the Method on the stars’ own fan pages, employing apps such as Periscope to needle-drop videos of key moments in the production process and using Instagram to share behind-the-scenes stills. The object is to keep fans engaged and involved in every step of the creative process by offering them an exclusive relationship with the movie. We will even invite them to join in the conversation by sharing their own videos and images.

Our strong online presence will also allow us to connect with the niche bloggers who comment on the categories and themes represented in the film. This will also help create conversations around Madness in the Methods, its genre and its cast.

Our aim is to create a dynamic community for fans, along with a one-stop-shop for exclusive insights and information. A bespoke Madness in the Method database will provide access to every announcement, release and update, as well as making it easy to purchase the movie by offering direct links to the likes of Amazon and iTunes.

We will also use our social-media outreach to seek out... sponsorship and branding opportunities. Involving brand partners in a high-profile project such as Madness in the Method increases publicity and exposure for all concerned. A tie-up with a brand that is a natural fit with Madness in the Methods’ target audience drives awareness of the movie among the brand’s consumers, while reinforcing the brand’s relevance to Madness in the Methods’ global community of fans.

To support the DVD release of the movie, we will produce exclusive EPK (electronic press kit) materials and production stills, including never-before-seen interviews with the movie’s cast, director, producers and key creative talent.

Other profile-raising initiatives will include offering the most influential movie websites exclusive set visits during production, along with on-set interviews with talent. We also aim to tap further into our database to run competitions in co-operation with these websites, thus increasing the number of new followers to our own database.

The prizes on offer will include signed DVDs, tickets to the VIP premiere, Q&A sessions with the cast and invitations to the after-party cocktail reception to celebrate (and promote) the film’s release.

In addition to harnessing social media to generate word-of-mouth, Madness in the Methods’ producers, in co-operation with the movie’s distributors, will make use of traditional marketing tools, such as outdoor, print, radio and television advertising, to promote the film on a local, national and international level.
Red Rock Entertainment works in conjunction with numerous UK film companies to raise equity for independent film projects. It focuses on those films that have already been completed or are almost complete, but require a final tranche of funding to cover the distribution costs.

Investing in films can offer generous returns. The benefits extend far beyond the sale of box-office tickets: DVD sales, licensing to TV broadcasters and online platforms, and merchandising revenue all count towards a film’s profit and can continue to generate returns for many years after its theatrical release. The chance to be part of the magic of the movie industry is another perk of many film-investment opportunities. In some cases, your investment entitles you to appear in the movie as an extra, attend film premieres and red-carpet events, and see your name appear in the credits at the end of the film.

As well as the potential for high returns, long-term earnings and a close encounter with show business, investing in the British film industry can also offer tax-relief benefits. A range of incentives is available to those who chose to invest in an SEIS or EIS film-investment scheme.
FILM SET VISITS
Patience is a virtue — and never more so than on a film set. Pick your moment to approach an actor carefully: it’s never a good idea to disturb talent when they are shooting a scene, or preparing to shoot one.

So be prepared to wait for the right moment to take a picture or ask for an autograph. You will probably be assigned with a ‘runner’ from the production company, whose job it will be to look after you and let you know what’s going on.

APPEARING AS AN EXTRA
Being an investor also gives you the opportunity to be cast as a background actor, or extra.

This is a performer in a film or television show who appears in a non-speaking capacity, usually in the background to the central action — as an audience member, for example, or a passer-by in the street.

PRIVATE SCREENINGS
Private film screenings form part of a film’s production and release cycle. To show off the film to its best advantage, special preview screenings are routinely held in low seat-count theatres offering high-quality projection and sound equipment.

These events, which are usually accompanied by food and drink, also feature commentary from the film’s producers, writers or actors. The guest list for a private screening typically includes VIP media personalities, investors, and key marketing and distribution executives.
Perks & Benefits of Investments

RED CARPET EVENTS

Attended by its stars, alongside A-list celebrities, industry moguls and the media, they epitomise the Hollywood dream.

When one of our films premieres, our investors are invited to join us on the red carpet, and experience the glitz and glamour of showbiz for themselves.
